

"Give a lie twenty-four hours start, and it will take a hundred years to overtake it." (by C.F. Dixon-Johnson, British author of the 1916 book, The Armenians, appalled over the deceitful practices of his book's subject.) Well, we are almost there after close to a century, and let us expose these Armenian fabrications to the fullest extent possible:

ARMENIAN FABRICATIONS

THE THREE PILLARS

((CRUMBLING))

Did the Young Turk regime of the Ottoman Empire organize the massacres that took place in 1915? Those who say yes, base their argument on the THREE PILLARS above which are crumbling down not because they have strange sounding names but for the reasons given on the following pages:

[Dear Reader, what you are about to discover on the following pages is just the tip of the iceberg of these Armenian Fabrications. That's why we are distributing these brochures to help inform the public. Please spread the word, tell your representatives not to believe these kinds of malicious fabrications and set the record straight. Thank you.]

To repeat: Did the Young Turk regime organize the massacres that took place in 1916? As Guenter Lewy, Prof. Emeritus of Political Science at the U. of Massachusetts-Amherst and a greatly respected American historian explains in his article cited in .08 on p. 4 (with own references in brackets [...]) :

“Most of those who maintain that Armenian deaths were premeditated and so constitute genocide base their argument on three pillars: the actions of Turkish military courts of 1919-20, which convicted officials of the Young Turk government of organizing massacres of Armenians, the role of the so-called "Special Organization" accused of carrying out the massacres, and the Memoirs of Naim Bey^[3] which contain alleged telegrams of Interior Minister Talât Pasha conveying the orders for the destruction of the Armenians. Yet when these events and the sources describing them are subjected to careful examination, they provide at most a shaky foundation from which to claim, let alone conclude, that the deaths of Armenians were premeditated.” Professor Lewy goes on to explain the aspects of the FIRST PILLAR, Turkish Courts-Martial of 1919-20 as follows:

“Following the Ottoman Empire's defeat in World War I, a new government formed and accused its predecessor Young Turk regime of serious crimes. These accusations led to the court-martialing of the leadership of the Committee on Union and Progress, the party that had seized and held power since 1908, and other selected former officials. The charges included subversion of the constitution, wartime profiteering, and the massacres of both Greeks and Armenians.” And further,

“Armenian writers have praised the contribution of the military tribunals for their elucidation of historical truth, but such broad conclusions are problematic given both the procedures of the trials and questions over the reliability of their findings. The tribunals lacked the basic requirements of due process. Few authors familiar with Ottoman jurisprudence have a positive assessment, all the more so with regard to military courts.Throughout the trials, the court heard no witnesses, and the verdict rested entirely on documents and testimony never subject to cross-examination.....” And in the final analysis:

“Contemporary Turkish authors dismiss the military tribunals of 1919-20 as tools of Allied retribution.^[21] At the time, the victorious Allies considered them a travesty of justice. The trials, British high commissioner S.A.G. Calthorpe wrote to London, are “proving to be a farce and injurious to our own prestige and to that of the Turkish government.”^[22] In the view of Commissioner John de Robeck, the tribunal was such a failure “that its findings cannot be held of any account at all.”^[23] When the British government considered holding trials of alleged Ottoman war criminals in Malta, it declined to use any evidence developed by the 1919-20 Ottoman tribunals.”

As for the SECOND PILLAR for their claim of purported premeditated acts, namely a unit called Teşkilat-i Mahsusa (Special Organization) Lewy states in the same article that “Several of the courts-martial held in 1919-20 made references to the destructive role of a unit called Teşkilat-i Mahsusa (Special Organization). Many proponents of the Armenian cause accept this accusation. Dadrian described the members of this unit as the main instrument used by the Committee on Union and Progress to carry out its plan to exterminate the Armenians. “Their mission was to deploy in remote areas of Turkey's interior and to ambush and destroy convoys of Armenian deportees,”^[24] he wrote. The Special Organization's “principal duty was the execution of the Armenian genocide.”^[25] But, Lewy continues to state that “Many of the allegations linking the Special Organization to massacres are based not directly on documents but rather on the sometimes questionable assumptions of those reading them. Dadrian has been among the most prominent scholars making assertions for which the original sources do not allow. He described a link between the Special Organization and the Armenian massacres, but Stange, the German officer who wrote the document in question, never actually mentioned the Special Organization but instead referred to “scum.”^[29] Nor is there any indication that Stange had any role in the Special Organization, as Dadrian asserted.^[30]

“Gwynne Dyer, one of the few Western scholars to have done research in the Ottoman military archives, has characterized as “gossip” the assertion that the Special Organization was complicit in the Armenian massacres.^[39] The archive of the Turkish General Staff is said to contain ciphered telegrams to the Special Organization,^[40] but these documents have not been subject to scholarly inquiry. Until new documents emerge, a link between the Special Organization and the Armenian massacres is nothing but uncorroborated assertion.”.....

Finally, the THIRD PILLAR upon which the charge of Armenian genocide rests is Aram Andonian's Memoirs of Naim Bey. Aram Andonian was an Ottoman Armenian, employed as a military censor at the time of mobilization in 1914. After his April 1915 arrest and deportation from Istanbul, he made his way to Aleppo where he obtained a permit for temporary residence. There he made contact with a Turkish official named Naim Bey, who handed over to Andonian his memoirs, which contained a large number of official documents, telegrams, and decrees, which, he stated, had passed through his hands during his term of office. Andonian translated these memoirs into Armenian. After some delay, they were published in Armenian, French, and English editions.^[41]

The documents reproduced in Naim Bey's memoirs are the most damning evidence put forward to support the claim of genocide. Particularly incriminating are the telegrams of the wartime interior minister Talât Pasha. There are many doubts as to the authenticity of the documents reproduced in Naim Bey's memoirs. Several Armenian scholars suggest that a German court authenticated five of the Talât Pasha telegrams during the 1921 trial of Soghomon Tehlirian, who assassinated Talât Pasha in Berlin on March 15, 1921.^[46] However the stenographic record of the trial, published in 1921, shows that defense counsel von Gordon withdrew his motion to introduce the five telegrams into evidence before their authenticity could be verified.^[47]

When The Memoirs were published in 1920, Armenian activists described its author as an honest individual driven to make amends for his misdeeds. But according to a letter composed by Andonian in 1937, Naim Bey was addicted to alcohol and gambling, and the documents he provided were bought for money. To have “unveiled the truth about him,” Andonian wrote, “would have served no purpose.”^[50] More likely, it would have undercut the very effectiveness of The Memoirs. Nobody would have believed the word of an alcoholic and gambler who might have manufactured the documents to obtain money.

In conclusion, Lewy states that “The THREE PILLARS (emphases added) of the Armenian claim to classify World War I deaths as genocide fail to substantiate the charge that the Young Turk regime intentionally organized the massacres. Other alleged evidence for a premeditated plan of annihilation fares no better.”
